FOREWORD

H. S. H. Prince Michael of Liechtenstein

Chairman of the Board of Directors of Liechtenstein
Finance e.V.

Liechtenstein's accession to the European Economic Area (EEA) in 1995 heralded a new era. On the one hand, the European internal market opened up for Liechtenstein companies, and on the other hand, Liechtenstein thereby committed itself to considering European regulations and incorporating them into national law. This was particularly true for the Liechtenstein financial centre, and had wide-ranging consequences for its stakeholders.

The Liechtenstein financial centre has sound foundations, is well-regulated and independently supervised. Strict statutory provisions and rules to combat money laundering, governing cross-border tax offences and terrorist financing guarantee the stability and security of the financial centre. Their adherence is safeguarded by an independent and strong Financial Market Authority. Liechtenstein's commitment to OECD standards on transparency and exchange of information in tax matters enables financial centre players to develop fully their core competencies in long-term, cross-border wealth issues in the interests of their clients. In particular during uncertain times.

Further, increasingly stringent requirements will continue to be imposed upon the financial centre and the stakeholders in the coming years. New stakeholders, new technologies, new products, new laws and directives will shape the financial centre. Thanks to the short decision-making channels in Liechtenstein and the open and trustworthy cooperation between the government, the administration and the financial centre associations, these requirements will also be implemented quickly and with a healthy sense of proportion. This will ensure that Liechtenstein continues to play a pioneering role as an adaptable and innovative financial centre in the future as well as for our future generations.

Export nation at the heart of Europe

The Principality of Liechtenstein is a diversified economic area. It is not merely the numerous locational advantages that speak for themselves. The country is also characterised by its pristine natural environment, the many recreational opportunities and the people of Liechtenstein themselves.

Nestled between Austria and Switzerland lies the world's sixth-smallest nation, at the very centre of Europe. In terms of entrepreneurship, however, the country is right at the forefront. World market leaders and globally operating industrial corporations, a professional, innovative financial centre and a large number of commercial enterprises characterise the Principality of Liechtenstein as a business location.

Form of government

The Principality is a constitutional hereditary monarchy on a democratic and parliamentary basis.

Prince

On 15 August 2004, Prince Hans-Adam II abdicated and appointed his son, Hereditary Prince Alois as the new head of state.

160 km<sup>2</sup>

Liechtenstein's borders and consequently its surface area have remained practically unchanged for 300 years. 42% of the total surface area or 67 km<sup>2</sup> is forest.

11 municipalities

Liechtenstein's settlements are divided into two electoral districts, known as the "Oberland" (Vaduz, Triesen, Balzers, Triesenberg, Schaan, Planken) and the "Unterland" (Eschen-Nendeln, Mauren-Schaanwald, Gamprin-Bendern, Ruggell, Schellenberg).

1:8

In Liechtenstein, the ratio between economically active companies and inhabitants is about 1:8 (in Switzerland approx. 1:14 and in Germany some 1:24).

German

Liechtenstein's official and national language is German.

38 747 inhabitants

Liechtenstein's population has increased more than four-fold over the past 100 years.

5 government members

The country's supreme executive body consists of the prime minister and four ministers.

25 members of parliament

Liechtenstein's parliament is also called the "Landtag" or "Hohes Haus".

41 784 jobs

Liechtenstein has more positions of employment than inhabitants. Each day over 20 000 people commute to the Principality for work.

Swiss francs

Liechtenstein made the Swiss franc (CHF) its legal tender on 26 May 1924.

Broadly diversified business centre with stable industrial and financial sector

Customs union

Liechtenstein is part of the Swiss customs territory. In addition to the customs union, there are over 100 further bilateral treaties with Switzerland.

Market access

Liechtenstein-based companies have unrestricted market access to 31 states and around 500 million people in Europe.

 Liechtenstein has the lowest public expenditure ratio (government spending in relation to GDP) of all European countries. In Switzerland the ratio is in the region of 30%, in Austria at over 50%.

 Legal certainty promotes innovation and reduces risks for all parties. That is why the Token and VT Service Providers Act ("TVTG") was introduced on 1 January 2020.

Stability, continuity, innovation and conformity – the Liechtenstein way

With its 300 year history, Liechtenstein stands for continuity and stability. Decisions are therefore made with an eye to the greatest possible future sustainability. Particularly noteworthy for the financial centre are the government declaration on the Automatic Exchange of Information in 2013 and the Financial Centre Strategy 2019.

On account of its geographical location, diversified economy and close integration with the international community, Liechtenstein is affected by international developments. Liechtenstein's financial centre is highly competitive and has international networks. It focuses on international clientèle. For this reason, international rules need to be observed. Liechtenstein has recognised that conformity with international standards can be a competitive advantage.

It has been part of the Liechtenstein approach for many years.

There are several important factors for a sustainable financial centre: On the one hand, these include outstanding services and attractive operating conditions. Also important, on the other hand, are integration and bilateral, multilateral and global cooperation. These are not obstacles to a successful financial centre; instead, they are crucial prerequisites. This also creates the basis needed to enable innovation in the financial centre. The Liechtenstein Blockchain Act (Blockchain-Gesetz) introduced in 2020 is a concrete result of the determination to pursue complex innovation in particular to create a legally secure space that optimally combines opportunities and international conformity.

For Liechtenstein, conformity is therefore not merely a buzzword, but is instead an integral and thriving component of all actions in the financial centre and beyond.

Government of the Principality of Liechtenstein

Membership of the EEA – for financial market stakeholders, this means the same statutory operating conditions apply as in EU countries

Mario Gassner, Chairman of the Executive Board of the Financial Market Authority

Mr Gassner, conformity with international and European standards is one of the most important principles of the Liechtenstein financial centre strategy – what has changed in this respect in recent years?

Since joining the EEA, Liechtenstein has been obliged to incorporate European standards in financial market regulation into national law. A veritable flood of regulation then descended on the financial centre as the EU's response to the global financial crisis of 2008/2009. The country has also consistently implemented international and stringent European rules in the fight against money laundering. It also became important to ensure administrative assistance in the securities field vis-à-vis foreign supervisory authorities following the FMA's accession to the International Organization of Securities Commissions (IOSCO). Central to Liechtenstein's recognition as a trustworthy partner was its commitment to the OECD standard for transparency and exchange of information in tax matters. Liechtenstein was an early adopter of the automatic exchange of information from the outset. Since 2017, Liechtenstein has exchanged data on financial accounts with tax authorities of other countries for tax purposes.

The effective implementation of international standards is often used as a benchmark of whether a country/state is considered trustworthy. What is the role of your supervisory authority?

Enforcing recognised international standards is a core element of our mission, along with ensuring financial stability and client protection.

The EU has established a new European supervisory structure after the financial crisis to harmonise the application of financial market regulation. This is known as supervisory convergence. At the same time, cooperation between the national supervisory authorities was strengthened. We have to show that we are an equivalent supervisory authority and that we supervise the internationally active financial centre credibly and effectively. This secures us market access. The FMA is fully integrated in the system of European financial supervision. We participate in numerous bodies and working groups and represent Liechtenstein's interests in these.

The volume of regulation has increased massively in recent years – how can this be implemented in a timely manner?

There has indeed been a massive increase in regulation. In 2005 the FMA was responsible for the implementation of 19 laws. Today the number has reached 36. Following the amendment, the Insurance Supervision Act ("Versicherungsaufsichtsgesetz") grew from 68 to reach 275 articles. At the same time, individual provisions have become more extensive and complex. In Liechtenstein we have short decision-making channels and a flair for pragmatism. This facilitates very efficient ways of working when it comes to national implementation. To overstate the point, one could say that anyone who knows something about regulation is obliged to put their know-how at the service of the state. We have these specialists at the FMA and support the government in its regulatory work. The involvement of industry associations is important to us. Within the context of the competitiveness of the financial centre, we promote market-oriented and workable regulations. We do not have to go beyond the given minimum standards or make use of the remaining discretionary leeway.

Stronger regulation, stricter rules – the pace of tightening rules is indeed tremendous. How can this even be managed? Can this still be said to be “healthy”?

In 2009, in the midst of the financial crisis, the G20 decided to extend the scope of financial market regulation to cover all stakeholders and markets. This is indeed what happened. With the banking package, the digital finance package and regulation in sustainability, further comprehensive regulatory projects are progressing at the European level. We are firmly of the opinion that every rule should serve a clear objective. Compliance costs have risen sharply for financial intermediaries, and this has put a significant squeeze on earnings in recent years. And regulation itself can lead to financial market risks. Within European supervisory bodies, we advocate moderate and proportionate regulation, for example, that there should also be simplifications for smaller banks. We also endeavour, wherever we can, to make it easier for financial intermediaries to apply the great many rules by providing information and guidance.

There has also been change in the financial sector. Tech companies are increasingly moving into the financial sector with digital products. The keywords are: cryptocurrencies, initial coin offerings, tokenised securities via blockchain. What role does the supervisory authority play here?

Here too, our role is to ensure client protection and combat abuses. We therefore pay close attention to the risks of the new business model. However, new financial technologies are first and foremost an opportunity for Liechtenstein. In 2017, we created a regulatory laboratory at the FMA that serves as a contact point for FinTechs and traditional players. Anyone with innovative ideas can quickly get an appointment with us. Within the framework of the applicable regulations, we strive to make it possible for innovative business models to be realised. In addition, the so-called “Blockchain Act” has been in force in Liechtenstein since the beginning of 2020. The law assigns to the FMA responsibility for registering service providers offering their services on so-called trusted transaction systems such as blockchain. We exercise event-related supervision over these service providers. The law also addresses compliance with due diligence requirements for the prevention of money laundering, which is a very important topic.

Liechtenstein, one of the world's “most compliant financial centres” – is that a true description?

I would say: Liechtenstein's financial centre is compliant with international standards and enforces them consistently and credibly. And this secures international market access.

Mario Gassner has been Chairman of the Executive Board of the Liechtenstein FMA since June 2008. As head of the Insurance Department at the Office of Economic Affairs, he was responsible for the supervision of insurance companies and occupational pension schemes from 1999 to 2004. When the Liechtenstein FMA was founded in the year 2005, Mario Gassner headed the insurance and occupational pension schemes unit.
